By no means is this a complete list. Such deaths are continuing to occur with no clear indication that the military leadership will limit the availability of antipsychotics, antidepressants or prescription “polypharmacy” which can never be scientific, safe or effective. I continue to find ‘new’ deaths every time I have a spare hour or two to begin Googling again.

I call to the readers attention the posting of Leland Tyrone which the editor of The Gazette tells us was altered at the military’s request. How common or routine are such alterations. How many of these probable SCDs have been called “suicides”? How many accidental or other multiple drug toxicities or overdoses when they are none of these things?

There can be no rational or scientific change of psychiatric drug policy in the US military until such time as there has been a full acknowledgement and explanation of these and all similar deaths in the military. See the CCHR documentary THE HIDDEN ENEMY about psychiatric drugging in the military and you will understand why the pertinent question is “Which soldier in the military is not on psychiatric drugs?”

While I am considering and listing only US soldiers, I am seeing substantial numbers of British and Australian soldiers as well dying probable sudden cardiac deaths. Such troops may well be under US command and may be taking like amounts of psychotropic drugs, perhaps leading to increased numbers of sudden deaths (perhaps cardiac, perhaps due to psychotropic drugs). I will try to hook up with Brit and Canadian allies and seek to interest them in scrutinizing this. It is to be recalled how rare such deaths were in the Vietnam war. (Eckhart)

15. Bachus, Gy Sgt. Christopher Scott, 38, died in his sleep Monday at Camp Lejeune, N.C. In the case of Gunnery Sgt. Christopher Bachus, it is far from clear that he received the least amount of medication possible Bachus received a diagnosis of PTSD, and starting in 2005, doctors put him on a regimen that included Celexa for depression, Klonopin for anxiety and Risperdal, an antipsychotic. In 2006, after a period of stability, a military doctor discontinued his medications. But six months later, Bachus asked to be put on them again.[found dead probable on antidepressant and antipsychotic. According to a detailed autopsy report, his depression and anxiety worsened in late 2006. Yet for unexplained reasons, he was allowed to deploy to Iraq for a second time in early 2007. But when his commanders discovered that he was on psychiatric medications, he was sent home after just a few months, records show. In early March 2008, a military doctor began giving him an opiate painkiller for his back. A few days later, Bachus, 38, called his wife, who was living in Ohio. He sounded delusional, she told investigators later, but not suicidal. "You know, babe, I am really tired, and I don't think I'll have any problems falling asleep tonight," he told her. He was found dead in his on-base quarters in North Carolina nearly three days later. According to the autopsy report, Bachus had in his system two antidepressants, the opiates oxycodone and oxycodone, and Ativan for anxiety. The delirium he experienced in his final days was "most likely due to the interaction of his medications," the report said. Nearly 30 prescription pill bottles were found at the scene, most of them recently prescribed, according to the report. [on Risperdal, PROBABLE SCD]

22. BAYNARD Sgt. S. Matthew Baynard Impression as of 5 31 13:May 31, 2006 – The average adult human heart weighs about 300 grams in men, and about 200 grams in women. The size and weight of the heart varies directly with ...Mother told we need time line and dose for all meds. This sounds more like a sudden card death making the cardiomegaly all-important. He was wide-awake, coherent normal at bedtime mother says, was snoring wife says at 4 found dead warm still at 7 am. What does heart microscopy show? Impression: with what I know, sounds clinically like a sudden cardiac death with enlarged heart and cardiac pathology likely the main causal factor. Methadone doe somewhat prolong the qt interval but at these doses probably not much and it is not much of a risk factor for Torsades de pointes arrhythmia and SCD. Will comment further when I have received more info. Has he had irregulaar pulse, shortness of breath with eertion, ankle fot swelling chest pain tith exertionn. This odes not sound much like cns depressant coma ever deeper with gradu al respiratory failure leading to death by that mechanism. Prob scd (apparently not on anything but methadone).

  27. BERTOLO 7 28 13 FORT MYERS BEACH, Fla. - A soldier from Fort Myers is dead days after he was reported missing. Army Specialist Brandon David Bertolo's body was found in a training area outside his main post in Fort Campbell, Kentucky. Wink News spoke exclusively with his father who says he can't believe his son is gone. "You just wake up everyday and you have to deal with it, it's part of life," David Bertolo said. Brandon Bertolo's father says his son was the perfect soldier. "He really excelled and he loved it there. He did a tour in Korea for a year and then another 9-months in Afghanistan as an army medic," he said, "He saw hostile environment, was able to do his job flawlessly. I just know that the army was really something that really worked for him. He felt really really good about his achievements." That's why friends and family were so worried when the 23-year old "Strike" Brigade soldier did not report for work. "Right away we went into panic mode. Started calling everybody," he said. The family printed posters and asked for help on Facebook hoping someone had information that would lead them to the missing medic. But on the morning of July 19th, his body was recovered in a wooded area near the South end of Fort Campbell, a few miles West of Cole Park Golf Course. "I think he was well loved and respected and I know from what I've read and all the messages that I've got from his superiors they were really shocked and really had high hopes for him," his father said. Brandon was David's only child and says Father's Day was the last time he saw his son alive. "He was just happy, looking forward because he was going to get transferred to the base that he was trying to get to for awhile," he said, "I just love him and I miss him dearly and it's just a tough time." The Army has not released a cause of death. Services for Brandon David Bertolo will be held August 8th at 1:00 p.m. at Coral Ridge Funeral Home. Later, the family learned he was considered AWOL. A body was found in a wooded area Friday in the south end of the Fort Campbell military post, said officials. The Army's criminal investigation division is looking into the matter, according to Brendalyn Carpenter with the public affairs office, and the post has not yet confirmed the identity of the body. A Fort Campbell spokesman would not offer details but said Bertolo was under investigation. "He's not a runner. He's always stood up to his responsibility, and it's really hard for us as parents not to even know why he's running," said stepmother Charity Bertolo.

61. Cassidy, Sgt. Gerald, who was in one of the transition units, was found dead in his room Sept. 21 2007 at Fort Knox, KY. , who was in one of the transition units, was found dead in his room Sept. 21 2007 at Fort Knox, KY, about 15 months after being wounded by a roadside bomb in Iraq. An autopsy later determined he had been dead for hours and might have been unconscious for days before he was found alone. The Army Criminal Investigation Command determined the death was accidental and caused by a multidrug toxicity complicated by severe atherosclerotic coronary arterial disease. Paul Boyce, an Army spokesman, said Friday that Surgeon General (Army) Schoomaker's intent by the comments was to educate about the growing health risk of overdoses in the military population and the American population as a whole. Sgt. Gerald Cassidy died after neglect at Army hospital A sergeant in the Indiana National Guard, G.J. had been injured in Iraq by a roadside bomb in June 2006. He returned to the U.S. five months ago, and was receiving inpatient medical care through the "Wounded Warrior Transition Programme" at Fort Knox, Kentucky. He told his mom he hadn't slept in days. Then two days passed, and neither Kay McMullen nor G.J.'s wife Melissa had heard a word from him. The silence was eerie. G.J was bored at Fort Knox and called them three or four times a day. He almost always answered his phone and told them many times he couldn't wait for his medical hold to end, so that he could get back to Indiana, where he planned to help raise his children and re-enter the civilian workforce as a high school teacher. Normally, he would call his family 3-4 times a day to talk to them. But when he did not call, the family started calling the hospital at 8 am on September 21st.

her identical twin sister, Kelli. First thing the next morning, she left her son with a neighbor, telling her, "I have to go to Kelli's.
She's dead." She was so sure of it that she called the police on the way. The officers went in first. They found Kelli Marie Grese, 37, dead of a self-administered prescription drug overdose. She had taken a massive quantity of the antipsychotic drug Seroquel. She had tried to kill herself with the same drug three times in the previous eight months, but those doses weren't fatal. This time, she made sure. She persuaded her doctor at the Hampton VA Medical Center to prescribe a 120-day supply of Seroquel. She took all or most of it, according to a pending lawsuit in U.S. District Court in Norfolk. Having been found dead this is a sudden unexplained death most likely cardiac. She Ramiro Hernandez III was discovered unresponsive [prob scd] many questions after young Bakersfield Marine found dead in barracks Aug 21, 2007 A Bakersfield family mourns the death of a young Marine, found dead in his barracks. Lance Cpl. Ramiro Hernandez III was discovered unresponsive early Monday morning, the family says he will likely be laid to rest next Tuesday. The 24-year-old Marine leaves behind a large, close-knit family -- and his death leaves many unanswered questions. The grief-stricken father says Marines came to the family's Bakersfield home Monday morning to notify them about the death, but the officers didn't have any information on the cause of death. "Apparently his friend came in, or something -- or his roommate came in," Ramiro Hernandez told Eyewitness News. "That's all they told me -- or told my wife." The father says Marines told the family the investigation is on-going. Asked if the young Marine had health problems, recent complaints or any changes in his activities -- the father said no. "No, not that he ever told us. I don't know, I don't know what happened." The family says Hernandez joined the Marines late last year, and served with the Third Marine Fourth Regiment. His group was set to go to Iraq later this year, but the family didn't know exactly when. The young Marine had already earned a number of awards. The "Paul Ison" honor was awarded to Hernandez after his fellow Marines picked him for his leadership skills. The father says Hernandez joined the Marines to serve, and with an eye on his future. "He wanted to do that and when he got done, he would come home and be a sheriff's deputy." The family says Hernandez was in boot camp in San Diego, spent time at Camp Pendleton, and was then stationed at 29 Palms. That's where he was found in his barracks Monday at about 1:00 a.m. Relatives say the young Marine was outgoing and friendly -- and always thinking of others. The heart-broken father says there's so much he'll miss about his son. "I love him and he'll always be in my heart and in my prayers," says Hernandez.

"We'll see each other some day."

Rachel Jones Chris Jones <rajones@fpcahinesville.com Subject: Chris Jones Good morning Stan, I did receive the autopsy and toxicology report for Chris. I also spoke to Dr. Tramaine, the doctor who did the autopsy. He informed me that Chris died from being on too many meds, as well as meds that should not have been mixed. He told me that Chris lost consciousness and his heart stopped. So it is as I suspected all along. I just knew he passed due to his meds. However, the report is claiming it was an accident because Chris had had a spritzer that day at the park so they are making out that the mixture of drugs with the alcohol, the temperature at the park that day, as well as Chris being sick from the new med he had just started is what caused his untimely passing. They just don't want to take responsibility that they caused this. I would be honored to have Chris added to the list for the Senator. Thank you so much for all your efforts and continued support! The girls and I will be in Arlington this weekend visiting Chris. Hope all is well your way. Give Shirley our best as well! God bless Rachel Jones.

279. NICHOLSON Soldier Found Dead In Fort Campbell BarracksPosted: Dec 04, 2007 7:06 AM PDT Updated: Dec 04, 2007 8:16 PM PDT FORT CAMPBELL, Ky. (AP) - Officials found a Fort Campbell soldier dead in a barracks, and military officials said they are investigating his death. According to Fort Campbell spokeswoman

- Cathy Gramling, another soldier found 22-year-old Pvt. Matthew Nicholson of the 101st Airborne Division on Sunday. Gramling said they were still looking into the cause of his death. Nicholson was a member of the 2nd Brigade currently deployed in Iraq. Nicholson got national media attention when he was charged for intervening in a fight with a man he thought was assaulting two women in Odesto, Calif. He was arrested and jailed in September, but prosecutors later dropped charges against him.

  283. ORT, Emily. 5 5 08 Fort Carson sent Emily Ort to train for the war in Iraq with bottles of narcotic medicines for neck and back pain. In April, Ort reported her medicines had been stolen from her at Fort

Irwin, a training base in Southern California. Her prescriptions were not refilled. Instead she was given four new medicines, including morphine. On May 3, three days after Ort was prescribed the potent new batch of painkillers, her bunk mates heard her moaning in her sleep at dawn. At 7:10 a.m. she was found unconscious on her cot. Ort, a 24-year-old soldier with a 16-month-old son, was pronounced dead an hour later. A coroner's report concluded an "accidental overdose of prescription medications" caused her death. The night before she died, she had talked to her mother, according to the San Bernardino County sheriff coroner's investigation. Vickey Ort told the coroner's investigator that her daughter did not sound like herself, that she was "drugged up" and slurring her words, and that her daughter admitted she was "out of it" because of her new medicines. The coroner's report noted that three days before her death Ort had been prescribed three painkillers — morphine sulfate, gabapentin and hydrocodone — and a muscle relaxant marketed as Flexeril. Bottles of another painkiller and an antidepressant were found by her cot. Prob scd

384. Waltz, Staff Sgt. Mark, August 27, 2008. In the last six months of his life, Staff Sgt. Mark Waltz tried 23 different prescription medications to relieve the pain of war. He came home from his second tour of Iraq suffering from combat stress, a traumatic brain injury, and relentless back pain. Army doctors prescribed a treatment that included 15 different painkillers and anti-inflammatory drugs, plus antidepressants, muscle relaxants and a blood-pressure medicine. The last two medications — morphine plus methadone — were prescribed on a Friday afternoon. That weekend, Waltz went to sleep and never woke up. The coroner's conclusion: mixed-drug intoxication. Chadwick Jacob, a marine, who served in Iraq, saved by kidney given him by 24 yo Lt Patrick Wayland, went into cardiac arrest on Aug 1 2011. [their dx, prob.] ..... Wayland, Patrick August 22, 2011 - After one Marine dies, his kidney saves another By Brittany Levine Los Angeles Times LOS ANGELES — Underscoring the deep bond among service members and their families, a 23-year-old Iraq war veteran has received a kidney from a fellow Marine left brain-dead after a training accident, squeezing what is normally a five-year wait into two days. As Sgt. Jacob Chadwick prepared to leave the San Diego hospital Aug. 11, hundreds of police cars and motorcycles escorted 2nd Lt. Patrick Wayland's casket through his hometown of Midland, Texas, where thousands lined the streets waving American flags. "Patrick took an oath to serve his country. Few people are able to do that," said Wayland's friend, 2nd Lt. John Silvestro. "Patrick, he would consider himself lucky to serve not only his country, but his fellow Marine." Staff at the University of California-San Diego Medical Center said they were surprised by the extra effort one family put in to help a stranger. "I've been doing this for 20 years and have never seen anything like it," said David Lewino, a transplant coordinator. "That whole sense of Marine family — you hear about it, but when you see it firsthand, you really believe it." By having a kidney designated to him, Chadwick was able to get off the waiting list. In October, Chadwick had an appointment to get his kidneys checked after experiencing severe headaches and dizzy spells. But that was the day his daughter, Ella Marie, was born. Chadwick put off going to the doctor, trying to enjoy his time with Ella. On Aug. 1, Wayland suffered cardiac arrest during a swimming exercise at Naval Air Station Pensacola in Florida. The 24-year-old Marine, the one friends called "Superman," would spend the next week in the hospital, his brain swelling. His family waited for a miracle. Doctors pronounced Wayland brain-dead Aug. 5. "I know we have a long and hard road in front of us," his father, David Wayland, wrote in an online journal after he learned of his son's condition. "But carry Patrick in your heart, and take comfort in knowing that he is leading God's Army in Heaven now."

ACKERMAN 9 27 13 The Atlanta Journal-Constitution

A recently discharged Army soldier from Sandy Springs was found dead inside his wrecked car Thursday, two days after he was last seen leaving a Buckhead bar.

Randal Andrew Ackerman, 31, was honorably discharged after a tour of Afghanistan. He was last seen leaving Hangovers bar around 2 a.m. Tuesday.

Longtime friend Carli Prillaman said Ackerman was always a very thoughtful person.

“He’s the type of person that literally always did everything he possibly could to help others,” Prillaman told The Atlanta Journal-Constitution.

About 6 p.m. Thursday, Georgia State Patrol troopers were called to investigate a wreck off Johnson Ferry Road.

“Upon arrival, troopers found a vehicle that had left the roadway, traveled down an embankment and overturned,” GSP spokesman Gordy Wright said in a statement. Ackerman was deceased inside the car.

Wright said the exact day and time of the crash has not been determined.
